A B S T R A C T

The present invention provides a method of implementing an admission control algorithm in a telecommunications system, in which method at least one parameter of said algorithm is adapted dynamically as a function of a traffic model representative of the traffic present.